Perspective on Whining

Third Sunday of Lent

Do not grumble as some of them did... - 1 Corinthians 10:10

Complain. Complain. Complain. The Israelites in the wilderness grew quite adept at grumbling about most everything. According to Paul, the Corinthians became proficient in this too, especially regarding his ministry. The passage today is Paul's attempt to both explain and defend himself. Voicing a complaint need not be harmful. It is actually psychologically healthy to let off some steam. If we do not do this, resentment and crankiness eventually develop. Even Jesus vented once in a while (my disciples do not understand my message; people keep asking for signs; the temple is overflowing with money changers). However, once complaints are voiced, that's it. Done and over with. When the same complaints keep being voiced, they turn into whining. This is when our spiritual life takes a dive. We lose perspective and begin blaming and verbally attacking others, forgetting that God guides our life, much like the people of Corinth did when they became consumed with grumbling about Paul.
