THE SIN OF UNBELIEF

We are accustomed to celebrate the feast of St. Thomas, who for a while incurred the sin of unbelief; as if our tender Mother Holy Church, as an additional safeguard, would make an example of the great apostle for our sakes and held him, who now reigns with Christ in heaven, up to us in the image of his earthly weakness in order to force us to consider that certain dispositions of mind are necessary for faith, and how the lack of these dispositions shows itself, and why that is blameworthy.

I think, then, that I shall be taking a subject suitable both to the season and the day if I attempt to set before you, my brethren, as far as time permits, how it is, humanly speaking, that a man comes to believe the revealed word of God, and why one man believes and another does not. And, in describing the state of mind and thought which leads to faith, of course I shall not be forgetting that faith, as I already said, is a supernatural work and the fruit of divine grace. I shall only be calling your attention to what must be your own part in the process.

As to the account given us in Scripture of St. Thomas' incredulity, its prominent points are these: first, that when told by his brethren that our Lord was risen he said, "Except shall see in his hands the prints of the nails, and put my fingers into the place of the nails, and put my hand into his side, I will not believe." Now, here the question is, What was wrong in this? For the other apostles had seen and touched our Lord, and appear not to have believed till they did.

Secondly, that our Lord said to him on a subsequent occasion, after allowing the evidence he desired, "Because you have seen me, Thomas, you have believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and have believed." Now, why is it blessed to believe in him with our seeing, rather than to have sight of him which the apostles had when they believed?

The subject is a very large one: I shall attempt to follow out only one of various trains of thought to which gives rise. (Fr. Josemaria)
